

Office

Sparkasse Werra-Meißner – Eschwege

Bright color accents structure acoustically the open office.

Starting Point

The new administration building for Sparkasse Werra-Meißner in Eschwege complements the brickwork building of the main offices, constructed in 1978, and the adjacent building with its Gründerzeit architecture from the 19th century. The customer lobby and all other departments of the main offices have gradually been remodeled in recent years as part of the aptly named program "Kurs Zukunft" (Setting a Course for the Future). The architect and interior design firm Bredt & Partner from Darmstadt, Germany, provided the overall concept.

Solution

The firm designed an open office concept in order to better improve internal communications channels. To do so, the measures improving the acoustic properties played a significant role. The ACOUSTIC COLOR FIELDS with the suspension system offers flexible and effective zoning options for the individual work spaces. The divisions between floors are effectively accentuated through a bright selection of colors creating different color zones.
